YOUK CHHANG's Documentation Center of Cambodia (DC-Cam) has paved the way for accountability and reconciliation in Cambodia. Since January 1995 he has led DC-CAM from his office in Phnom Penh. He also publishes Searching for the Truth, a monthly magazine in Khmer which bring testimony by survivors of the Khmer Rouge years to a wider audience. Recently, he agreed to administer the museum and archival records of Tuol Sleng (S-21), one of several major Khmer Rouge torture and killing centers. DC-CAM has also preserved the records of the Khmer Rouge secret police and many of the records of the Central Committee of the Cambodian Communist Party. A survivor whose family suffered at the hands of the Khmer Rouge, Youk Chhang moved from refugee camps to the United States and then back to Cambodia. In May 2007, Youk Chhang was named by TIME magazine as one of the 100 most influential people of the year. DC-Cam, MIGS, and the public historians at Concordia are co-applicants to CIDA for a major "Building on Success" grant.
